RETAIL DIVISION

Over the challenging economic circumstances in 2010, we saw very strong growth in the performance of our Retail Division. Not only did we achieve an increase in sales volume, but we also saw a significant improvement in our operating performance in terms of profitability in the first half of 2010.

Our Retail Division's success was driven by a number of key factors. First, we focused on our core product lines, including mobile phones, tablets, and accessories. Second, we implemented a number of cost-saving measures, including streamlining our supply chain and reducing our inventory levels. Third, we invested in our marketing and promotional activities, which helped to drive sales and improve our brand awareness.

The Retail Division's performance was also supported by our strong relationships with our suppliers and our commitment to customer service. We continue to invest in our retail network and our product offerings, and we are confident that we will continue to achieve strong growth in the future.

Dealership activation takes work. It takes energy to make appointments, to decorate the showroom, and to educate the entire dealership staff about the event. It takes energy to deliver a passionate goodwill sales message with a test drive and proposal served to every customer. Why every customer? Because we believe that every customer is a buyer, and when we believe, we do the work, and that work sells cars.

In the "real world" there is a gap between technology and the car buying transaction. The bridge to that gap is a relationship, a quality engagement with a professional salesperson who thinks and acts right selling a car. A sales professional who uses their knowledge, soft skills, and techniques will weave the story of the sale and compel the customer to believe that purchasing is the right thing to do.

When you strengthen the quality of your salesperson's interaction with your customer, everyone wins. Your salesperson wins, your dealership wins, and your customers win.
